

202X Evolving Seas RCN Virtual Lab Meeting Program Application

This form is for undergraduate or graduate students to apply to this program. In this program, the RCN seeks to provide training to students at the undergraduate or graduate level (“mentees”) by participating in lab meetings of a research group that shares their interests. The mentee will participate by attending lab meetings during the 202X-202X. The Principal Investigator for the research group (“mentor”) will dedicate portions of two lab meetings to the mentee’s professional development. The format for lab meetings dedicated to the mentee’s professional development is flexible, but could take the form of review of graduate school or grant application statements at lab meeting, research presentation at lab meeting, lead paper discussion at lab meeting, etc. For more information check out <INSERT WEBSITE LINK>.

Please ensure when you select a mentor, that you are able to attend their established lab meeting time for this fall.
